"How blest is he who his progenitors
With pride remembers; to the list'ner tells
The story of their greatness, of their deeds,
And, silently rejoicing, sees himself
The latest link of this illustrious chain!
For seldom does the self-same stock produce
The monster and the demi-god; a line
Of good or evil ushers in at last
The glory or the terror of the world."
[Goethe's Iphigenia.]

"The Lord shall count, when he writeth up the people, that this man was born there." Psalmus LXXXVII; 6.

EDWARDS.

ALEXANDER EDWARDS came from a border town in Wales, 1610, and settled in Springfield, Mass., where six of his children were born. He removed to Northampton about 1635, and died there Sept. 4, 1690. His youngest son and daughter were born in Northampton.

It appears from a deposition that his minister in Wales was a Mr. Wroth, a conspicuous Puritan preacher. He embarked at Bristol.

The ship "Mary and John," Capt. Squibb, sailed from Plymouth March 20, 1630; arrived at Nantasket Point, Boston Harbor, May 30, bringing one hundred forty choice characters. They settled principally in Dorchester, and in Windsor, Ct., and from these two places many removed to Northampton. In the "Mary and John" came the ancestors of General Grant, of Dr. J. G. Holland, the minister, Mr. Warham, who settled first at Dorchester and after at Windsor, Roger Clapp, Thomas Ford, John Strong, and Lieut. Wm. Clark. In 1630, fifteen hundred people came from England to Massachusetts.

Northampton first settled in 1651, and called Nonatuck. It was changed to Northampton in honor of some of the first settlers, who came from Northampton, Eng. The first "meeting house" was finished in April the next year, 26 by 18 ft., with one door and two windows. The church was organized 1661, and a new house built, 40 ft. square. In 1663, "after solemn and extraordinary seeking to God for his direction and blessing," John Strong was chosen ruling elder. Whoever filled this office occupied a position in the community second only to the minister. There were but three ever held that office in Northampton: John Strong, Preserved Clapp, son of Roger Clapp, and Ebenezer Strong, son of John Strong. The first white child born in Northampton was a son of Joseph and Mary Bliss Parsons. The same year (1656) Isaac Sheldon was born.

Skaneateles' first settler came in 1793. Before the close of that century some of the Edwards family came. The first church was the Presbyterian, situated on Onondaga street, on the hill, just east of the village corporation. It was dedicated March 1, 1809. There were fifteen original members, and of them three were Edwardses: Solomon Edwards, Electa, wife of Thaddeus Edwards, and Elizabeth, wife of Ahanson Edwards. Simeon Edwards and family came to Skaneateles the last of February, 1809, and thought they were exceedingly fortunate to be here at the dedication, as that was a notable event. The Presbyterians occupied that building twenty years; then sold to the Baptist society and built the brick church now standing on Genesee street. The first funeral held in it was that of Simeon Edwards, in 1830. The first child baptized in it was his grandson, Alexander Miller, who was born the day the first paper was published in Skaneateles, July 28, 1829. The first wedding in this house was a double one, and of two of the grand-children of Simeon Edwards, Melzar Edwards to Frances Bascom, and Elizabeth Edwards to Stephen A. Gifford.

It is thought the oldest native of Skaneateles, now living, is Mrs. Evelina Clark, of Marshall, Mich., b. Sept. 17, 1805. She was the eldest child of Thomas and Minerva (Porter) Greves. Her husband was Rev. Calvin Clark, son of Nathan and Lovisa (Edwards) Clark, of Westhampton. They were married in 1835, and went immediately to Marshall. He was prominent in the ministry: died 1877.

His brother, Rev. Anson Clark, of West Salem, Wis., resided in that state 35 years; married Mary Hooker, a descendant of Rev. Thomas Hooker and Jonathan Edwards. Mr. Clark quotes to his sons—

"Tell me not from what stock you grew,
But prove me your stock by what you do."

Many of the grand-children of Ebenezer and Lucy Edwards were exceedingly interesting, especially the children of Nancy Edwards and Isaac Clark. BENJAMIN²

Alexander Alvord was one of the early settlers of Northampton, and probably ancestor of Jerusha Alvord, who m. Noah Edwards 1749.

From "History of Northampton."

Samuel Edwards, Jr., built in 1708 on what is now No. 60 South street, Northampton. A part of the house was moved from "Welch End" (now West st.), so called from Alexander Edwards of Wales, who lived there. The premises are still (1880) in the family. His youngest son, Nathaniel, next occupied the place, and taught one of the earliest schools, on South street; continued teaching twenty years. The school house stood opposite his residence. His wife's father, Benjamin Alvord, was a weaver and an express rider, and somewhat actively engaged in the French and Indian War. Nathaniel had a son Abner; d. 1765.

His son, Nathaniel, Jr., was college educated, and followed his father as teacher on the same spot; went by the name of "Master Edwards." He was exceedingly troubled that girls did not have the same school advantages as boys, and devoted his leisure in vacation to teaching them. Thanks to "Master Edwards" for his enlightened views, his public spirit. Not very long after this, in 1802, the town turned over a new leaf. All over the Commonwealth better views and a wiser course prevailed. He died 1818. His wife was Rachel Clapp. She died 1868, aged 100 years.

"ELDER" JOHN STRONG, b. 1605, at Taunton, Eng., s of Richard Strong. His grandfather was a Roman Catholic. He came in the "Mary and John," 1630; settled first at Dorchester; was a resident of Hingham in 1635; came from there to Taunton, Mass., or as it was then called by its Indian name, Cohannett; was there from 1637 to 1643; removed to Windsor, and from there to Northampton, 1659; d. 1699. The names of John Strong, and of his brother-in-law, Walter Deane, who married his sister Elinor, are given in the list of the first seven freemen of Taunton or Cohannett. In 1638 John Strong was chosen constable. It was an important office, representing the power and authority of the General Court. The constable performed the duties of a sheriff, a police officer, a collector of public rates and taxes, and was the guardian of the good order and morals of the inhabitants. The first purchase of land in the settlement was in 1637, and John Strong and Walter Deane are in the list of purchasers. They were both very prominent. The purchase was made of Massasoit, called the "Good Old Massasoit." He owned the whole of that region.

John Strong's first wife died soon after landing, leaving one son, John. He married in 1635 Abigail Ford, dau of Thomas Ford.

Business greatly improved in Northampton after his coming. He was a tanner, had twelve children when he came, and at his death, April 11, 1699, had sixteen children. They were all married, and in 1881 his descendants had amounted to 28,867. His son Samuel m. 1681 Esther Clapp, and 2d Ruth, dau Isaac Sheldon, Sr. His dau Elizabeth b. Windsor 1648; d. Northampton 1736; m. 1669 Esq. Joseph Parsons. His dau Mary m. John Clark; they were the parents of the ten long-lived children. His dau Hannah m. Capt. Wm. Clark, brother of John and son of Lieut. Wm. Clark.

SOLOMON WILLIAMS Pastor of ye chh
Rev Mr Rice

Rev. Solomon Williams was pastor of the church in Northampton fifty-six years previous to 1831, when he died. He always wore knee breeches, silver-buckled shoes and wide-brimmed hat. He was a tutor at Yale with Timothy Dwight of Northampton, who was afterward president of that institution. Not a showy man, but talented and good. A daughter, nearly 90, is living in the house where she was born, and where her mother was born 130 years ago—in 1756.

"To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die."

The funeral of Mrs. Electa (Edwards) Bates, wife of Abner Bates, was attended from Plymouth Church, Syracuse, her pastor, Mr. Strieby, conducting the services. In his remarks he said: "Mrs. Bates was descended from a branch of the Edwards family that has been remarkable for depth of piety and clearness of intellect, and her own mental and religious character rendered her worthy of her ancestry. She was always religiously disposed, and even from childhood entertained a strong desire to be a Christian. But the period marked as the time of her conversion was the year 1818, when her brother, strong and vigorous in mind and body, was stricken down to the ground like Saul of Tarsus under conviction of sin. This event made a deep impression on her mind, and led to her entire consecration to Christ. From this period onward her experience was uniform and her Christian activity constant. Her character was one of marked traits. Among the most prominent of those traits was kindness. This, kindling at the centre, was a warmth and light in the family and the circle of her relatives. But it stopped not there, shedding its benign influence upon all around her, friends and strangers, the poor and the oppressed. Another marked trait of her character was energy, and this was uniformly combined with self-sacrifice. She had in an unusual degree the power of accomplishment, and she seemed never to think of her own ease and comfort when there was an opportunity of ministering to the happiness of others. With all these striking traits, another still may be mentioned—her humble faith in God and resignation to His will. Her hope was in Christ alone. She was called to pass through many trials, but in them all she saw a Father's hand and bowed submissively beneath the stroke. Quiet is her rest after the toil of life, and pleasant is her memory to those who survive her."

A person of quick perception and active sympathies, her heart and hand were ever ready to assist the suffering and afflicted. Engaging in her manners, and affectionate, she interested all whom she met; but in her daily walk at home, performing the duties of wife, mother and friend, one saw in her most to love. "The Clevelands, the best blood of Windham County, Conn., of the Puritan stock."

Moses Cleveland came from Ipswich, Suffolk County, England, 1635. Made a freeman at Woburn 1643, probably at 21 yrs. old.

From the Woburn, Mass., records: "Many have been the descendants of Moses Cleveland, who came to New England 1635, and established himself in Woburn about 1643, who have done worthily in their day; have been distinguished not only by their position in society, but by their weight of character and influence, and by the usefulness of their lives."

Mr. Hinman, in his "Puritan Settlers," gives the following account of the name Cleveland: "This family probably derived the name from the town Cleveland, in the county of Durham, Eng. The principal branch was seated in the county of York. Early in the 13th century Sir Guy de Cleveland was present at the siege of Boulogne, France, and at the battle of Poitiers, where he commanded the spearman. The word is a corruption of Cliff-land." Another account is that it was taken from "Clough," which was a narrow fissure between hills.

Coat of Arms: Per chevron, sable and ermine, a chevron engrailed, counter charged. Crest, A demi-old man, habited azure, on his head a cap gules, turned up with fur, holding in his dexter hand a spear, proper, having from the blade a golden cord passing behind and coiled in the left hand. Motto, Pro Deo et Patria.

Mrs. Hannah Cleveland of Skaneateles, N. Y., completed her hundredth year Nov. 14, 1856. Fifty-two of her kindred and friends came together at the house of her son, Lewis W. Cleveland, to exchange congratulations with their aged ancestor. Four generations were present. To be there made one feel that he was living in antediluvian times. In the afternoon religious services were held. The venerable Father Parsons of Marcellus, nephew of Mrs. C., took part in the exercises. Rev. Edward Clark of Massachusetts, grand-son of Mrs. C., delivered a short but very interesting discourse, founded on Lev. xix; 32: "Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head, and honor the face of the old man, and fear thy God; I am the Lord." A poem was then read, composed by Miss Delia Strong of Massachusetts, grand-daughter of Mrs. C. After these services all partook of a rich repast. At the head of the table sat the centenarian with Father Parsons. The day passed pleasantly to all. The surviving children were all present, seven daughters and one son. The century of her life has been an eventful one. When she was a girl in her teens, Napoleon Bonaparte was born in the island of Corsica. He lived more than fifty years, and has been an inhabitant of the tomb more than thirty-five years. At her birth Washington was a young man twenty-four years of age. Only the year before he had distinguished himself at Braddock's defeat. Mrs. C. was of genuine Puritan extraction. For seventy-seven years she has been a devoted Christian. The Bible is still her daily study and Christ her daily hope. She is in the enjoyment of usual health, is active and sprightly and moves about with as quick a step as any of her daughters. Much credit is due her son and his family for their kind treatment of this centenarian member of their circle.

The following poem was read on the above occasion:

What brings this household band together now?
Why leave your scattered homes to mingle here?
It is no common call that ye obey.
But few e'er look upon a scene like this:
The present and the far off past are blent
In one.

Now backward we will turn our thoughts:
This fourteenth day, one hundred years ago,
Where the Connecticut's clear waters wind
Along the vale, and lave on either shore
The foot of Holyoke and his brother Tom,
A mother folded in her arms a tiny babe.
The infant grew a child; the child became
A maiden—wife—and mother. And though years
And scores of years rolled on, yet still she lives.

To-day a second century begins!
One hundred Springs have famed that mother's brow,
One hundred Summers brought their fruits to her,
And Autumn's falling leaves a hundred times
Have fallen, since first her eyes beheld the day;
A hundred Winters o'er her head have passed—
And still she lives, a noble monument
Of other days, with heart and voice to speak
The praises of her God.

But where are all the playmates of that child?
The joyous ones who trod life's early path
With her. All, all are numbered with the dead.
From earth they all have passed away; not one
Remains to join the circle of to-day.

'Tis meet her children now should gather here
Once more to gaze upon that Mother's face,
To feel her fond embrace and hear the words
Of kindness flowing from that mother's heart;
For from that heart a century has not
Effaced a Mother's strong and changeless love.
Time's hand has gently passed o'er mind and form;
She moves about with step as quick as youth;
Intelligence still beams in those dark eyes;
She ne'er forgets to praise her God, and ask
His richest blessings to descend on all.

But is this circle all unbroken now?

Are there no faces the heart remembers, while
The eye beholds them not, and seeks in vain?
Not all are here—For some are gathered where
The eye of Faith alone can see them now.
Though memory oft recalls these cherished ones,
Three faithful sisters long have slept amid
New England's rugged hills—Your early home;
The youngest born—loved son and brother, 'neath
The purple sod was laid in manhood's prime;
The husband—father of this gathered band—
Now rests on Skaneateles' lovely shore.
An only brother, sisters seven are here,
And each of these will drop affection's tear
O'er husband, wife or children gone before.
So smiles and tears alternate in this world,
And joy and grief are blended into one.

Your children too, and children's children meet
With you to celebrate this wondrous day.

These hundred years; what changes have they wrought!

In them our nation had its birth; and we
Have gone from strength to strength, till now
The broad extent we quite surpass our Motherland.
The hoisted rights of liberty, which we claim
Our sires achieved for us and sealed with blood.
A thriving, happy people we've become,
Though now, alas! thick clouds hang o'er our heads,
And fearful shins seem threatening to destroy.
In art, what progress marks the flight of years!
Behold its onward march e'er sea and land,
But time forbids to dwell on themes
Most dear to every noble, Christian heart

One hundred years from now we ne'er shall see:
Then let us each and all wisdom from the past,
And each improve the present golden hour.
Amid our smiles and tears, our joy and grief,
Let grateful praise ascend from every heart,
And humble, fervent prayer be raised to God,
That He will give eternal life to all.
And will these gathered friends e'er meet again?
Ah, no! on earth we all shall meet no more.
Oh, may we all be washed in Jesus' blood,
And meet at last around the Throne of God,
And evermore behold our Father's face,
And sing redeeming love.

Died.—In Skaneateles, June 14th, at the residence of her son, Lewis W. Cleveland, Mrs. Hannah P., widow of the late Nehemiah Cleveland, aged 101 years and seven months.

The simple record of the death of this aged person suggests a train of associations around which it might be both pleasant and instructive to linger; but it is our purpose, only very briefly, to give a glimpse of her character, and some facts connected with her life.

Hannah Parsons was born in Northampton, Mass., Nov. 14th, 1756, where she resided until her marriage. Trained by parents of the real New England stamp, according to the customs and principles of the last century, she was a fair sample of sterling New England character. In her girlhood she associated with some who have occupied high positions in Church and State, and who long since, at full age, have gone to their rest. In 1779 she united with the Congregational church in Northampton, some twenty-five years after the dismission of the distinguished Rev. Jonathan Edwards. In 1781 she married Nehemiah Cleveland of Williamsburgh, Mass., in which place they resided for thirty-five years. It was in the stirring times of the American Revolution, in which war Mr. C. took an active part, that their married life began. To rear a large family, in those times, on the rugged hills of Williamsburgh, called into active exercise all the noble elements of character she possessed. She displayed sound common sense, mingled with a good degree of native shrewdness, a clear judgment and untiring energy. She practiced habits of economy, genuine industry and active benevolence, while governing and pervading all were seen and felt the bright and genial influences of a devoted Bible piety. Her labors were not confined to the care of her own numerous household, but her hands ministered to the wants of the sick and the destitute. She often went out on horseback, on errands of mercy, carrying articles of comfort and cheering the sick and afflicted with words of christian love and sympathy. The Church of Christ ever found in her a ready, efficient helper, the sorrowing a sympathizing friend, and those in doubt a wise counsellor. Her husband was for many years an esteemed officer in the church, and they went hand and hand in their christian pathway. In 1817 Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland removed to Skaneateles, where they lived together for twenty-six years, Mrs. C. surviving her husband nearly eighteen years. They had twelve children, three of whom died in childhood, and nine lived to become heads of new households. The aggregate age of the eight children who survive their mother is five hundred and sixty-eight years, the average being seventy-one. Mrs. C.'s descendants have been one hundred and twenty, of whom eighty-eight are now living. She had a sister who entered her hundredth year, and another her ninety-ninth, the aggregate age of the three sisters being three hundred and one years and ten months.

But the longest life must have its close on earth. Here in the family of her son she cheerfully and quietly spent the evening of her days, receiving the kindly attention and filial care of her household. And we would humbly invoke the richest of Heaven's blessings to rest upon them in spiritual and temporal gifts, for their cheerful and hearty obedience of the "first commandment with promise." She retained in a remarkable degree her physical and mental powers, and probably very few at the present day pass one-fourth of a century, who experience so little physical suffering as did she in a life of more than a hundred years. With perhaps three or four single exceptions, she has not had occasion to consult a physician during the last sixty years. Until the last few months she was always busy, occupied either with her knitting or a book. She was social and ever attentive to the comfort of her guests, and when her powers of body and mind were well nigh exhausted by age, she would repeat treasured passages of scripture and sacred poetry for the entertainment of those who called upon her. She was very fond of children, and up to the last few weeks of her life never failed to notice them kindly; and many a child will long remember the words of John Rogers, so often repeated by her:

"See, first, I say, the living God,
And always him adore,
And then be sure that He will bless
Thy basket and thy store."

Her parting admonition to many a guest was "Trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed;" or "Do good as you have opportunity, and mind not to whom." She was not unmindful of her mercies, and was grateful for every favor. She seldom alluded to her great age without adding:

"What shall I render to my God
For all his kindness shown?
My feet shall visit Thine abode,
My songs address Thy throne."

"And now after I have lived so long I must die and come to judgment." But Jesus was her friend and she was at peace. It hardly seemed like death, so gently and sweetly did her lamp go out. May the mantle of her earnest piety and noble worth rest upon her children, and their households after them to the latest generation."

Her funeral was largely attended in the Presbyterian church. The funeral sermon was preached by Prof. Hopkins, of Auburn Theological Seminary. The following extract is given: "Among those redeemed and happy souls, we are well assured the venerable saint whose mortal part we are conveying to the tomb rejoices and worships to-day. For more than eighty years she has been a professed disciple of the Lord Jesus Christ, and for forty-four years a member of this church. She has adorned her profession by a life of consistent and exemplary piety. Her religion has made her whole life beautiful, and especially so amid the infirmities of old age. No peevishness or fretfulness in her; no unreasonableness or impatience, even under the extraordinary burden of over a hundred years. But in the kind and and signal providence of God, that burden pressed more lightly on her than fourscore often does upon those who, by reason of strength, attain that age and find it to be but labor and sorrow. Long past her century, she retained her bodily health and activity, and the unimpaired use of all her faculties; and when, within a comparatively very recent period, her judgment as well as her senses began to fail, it was her delight to repeat passages of sacred writ, with which long familiarity with the Word of God had stored her mind. She has come to her grave—shall we say as a shock of corn fully ripe? She seems rather to have been a sheaf which the reaper Death had forgot, and has come back long after the usual harvest time to fetch home to his garner. But as respects all the circumstances of her death, as in her life, she has been blessed. God did not cast her off in her old age, nor forsake her when her strength failed. He provided for her respectful tenderness, kind nursing, prompt attention to every want, in the filial piety of her son, Mr. Lewis Cleveland, and his family; and I rejoice to record this fact to-day, to his honor and theirs, that they never wearied of their mother; they never thought she was living too long; they never fell off in their kindness and attention; till now, at the age of one hundred and four years and seven months, she has breathed her last in their benedictions and their tears. May God return the blessing tenfold on their heads, and on the heads of their remotest posterity."

WEST CHESTERFIELD.—A GOLDEN WEDDING.—One of those rare occasions in married life, a golden wedding, was celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Clarke, of Chesterfield, on Wednesday last. Fifty years before, on the 25th of May, 1809, having joined hands and hearts, they turned their faces towards the hills of Chesterfield for their future home. Here, in this quiet and delightful spot, a kind Providence having watched over them for this long period, and preserved them to each other and the world, it seemed fitting that a few of their friends should meet with them to exchange the congratulations of a golden wedding day. About thirty of their friends from abroad, feeling that such joyous occasions are extremely rare, went up thither, quite a number from Northampton. Some of the latter, in harmony with the occasion, went from here in one of the "old line stages," an institution of the hills in days gone by, but now superseded by modern improvements of travel. So great was the enthusiasm inspired by this reminiscence of "ye olden time," that one of the old inhabitants could not contain his emotion, but greeted the stage with three hearty cheers. After attending to the wants of the animal nature, which were most amply provided for, came appropriate social and religious exercises, commenced by singing the hymn sung fifty years before on the occasion. A clergyman present, connected with the family, then led in prayer, after which Rev. Edward Clarke, the only surviving child of the aged pair, gave a brief sketch of some events in the life of his parents, of the scenes of joy and sorrow through which they had passed, together with the changes in their respective families in fifty years. It was stated as a remarkable fact, that of the family from which the bride was taken, consisting at that time of the parents and nine children, the mother and eight children still live. The former is nearly 103 years old, and her youngest child 61 years old. Two or three original poems, contributed for the occasion, were read, and brief remarks, both serious and jovial, were made by other gentlemen present, which with vocal and instrumental music by an amateur musician, added much to the delights of the day.

The following hymn was sung, the words being prepared by Miss Delia Strong, of Northampton:

To God let grateful praise arise,
For this glad, golden day.
And all the joys that cluster round
This twenty-fifth of May.

Praise Him for all His hand has wrought,
Since eighteen hundred nine;
In all these years His hand hath proved
A power and love divine.

Praise him for fifty gracious years,
Vouchsafed this wedding pair;
For mercies past, and present good,
Which they together share.

Praise him for earthly treasures dear,
For friendship's smiling face;
For every joy from youth to age,
But more for saving grace.

Praise him for sweet assurance given,
That when this life shall close,
Their Saviour shall conduct them home,
Where endless pleasure flows.

Praise him for this inspiring view
Of rocks and ledges bold:

For towering hills, and flowery vales,
And all our eyes behold.

Praise him for all the social joys
Of this delightful day.
As often as bright thoughts recall
This twenty-fifth of May.

Hampshire Gazette, 1859.

Mrs. Olive Cleveland Clarke, now living in Springfield, Mass., daughter of Nehemiah and Hannah Parsons Cleveland, was born Sept. 26, 1785. She married Richard Clarke, May 25, 1809, and lived with her husband in Chesterfield till he died, 1876. In 1882 she removed with her son, Rev. Edward Clarke, to Springfield. Great interest is felt in her by all her friends and by strangers—that she has attained such age, and that her life is still so bright to her. Her son and his family are very attentive to her every wish, and all of their arrangements are pleasing to her. Like many aged people, she vividly remembers the scenes of her youth. In 1880 she wrote a sketch, "Things that I Remember at Ninety-five," printed in pamphlet form, for private distribution. In it she says, "I distinctly remember hearing the bells toll for Washington, and they tolled a long, long time." But what is so very rare, she takes a lively interest in the affairs of the day, reads the daily papers and is well posted in news. When she was eighty-six years old she was relieved of all cares, and since that time has been constantly engaged in reading, writing and fancy work. She embroiders worsted beautifully, and has given each of her twelve nieces and many other friends a large piece of her work—a chair seat, ottoman cover or sofa pillow—all handsome patterns. Smaller pieces without number have been given to friends. The first piece of woman's work entered for exhibition at the New Orleans fair was some of her work done the month she was one hundred. Her correspondence is large. She writes legible and interesting letters. She retains what she reads, and in the last fifteen years has read many histories, as "Hume's History of England," Mearns and Josephus and also many theological works. The celebration of her birthday is a yearly anticipated event. On her ninetieth anniversary, William Cullen Bryant and his daughter called upon her and presented her with a shawl.

Sept. 26, 1885, was a perfect day, and friends far and near gathered to express their interest and affection. The house was thronged from "morn till dewy eve" till nearly four hundred names were registered; and not one enjoyed the day more than Mrs. Clarke. She took each one by the hand, and without fatigue. Letters and telegrams were received from those that could not be present, one signed "From a chip of the Cleveland Block." Many tokens were left her, among them, "Pictures of a School in Africa, with Views of Scenery," from a grand-niece, a teacher in Africa; from ex-Gov. Wiland Hall, a photograph of himself; some photographs from other friends; motto cards (And even to your old age I am He) decorated with one hundred golden links; banner (With long life will I satisfy Thee); chenille shawl; decorated fruit plates; key board. Of books she had "Testament and Psalms," "Mary and Peace," "Royal Promises," "Words of Love and Cheer," "Lives of the Three Mrs. Judsons," "Gates into the Psalm Country," "Crimson of Gold Threads," and from John H. Bryant, his "Poems Written from Youth to Old Age," on the fly leaf of which he wrote, "To Mrs. Olive Cleveland Clarke, presented by John H. Bryant, on her reaching the age of one hundred years—Sept. 26, 1885—"

"Ancient dame, how wide and vast
To a race like ours appears,
Rounded to an orb at last,
All thy multitude of years."

She also had sent a large and elegant cake with her name and age in raised letters on the frosting, and a score of baskets of fruit and more than two score of bouquets; and what particularly pleased her, a gold thimble, which she uses daily.

Rev. Pliny Steele Boyd, of Granby, sent these verses.

The fountain of perpetual youth
And beauty, in a land of flowers,
Ponce de Leon once sought forthsooth;
But thou more fortunate in truth
Hast found it in this land of ours!

Long from that fountain hast thou quaffed
The waters clear of life and cheer;
Largeness of health was in the draught;
And drinking deep thy soul has laughed
Old Time to scorn this many a year.

Thy vassal, shall he longer wait,
Who reverently thy brow has kissed?
Who joins us now to celebrate
Thy victory over him and fate,
Yet fain would bide a holy tryst?

A hundred happy, golden years
Come trooping back to greet you now;
Some wreathed with smiles, a few with tears,
All hush'd with the love that cheers,
Bring fresh their laurels for your brow.

Their voices, musical and sweet,
Re-echo in your breast once more;
The friends of youth unite to greet
You; angel visitants complete
The choral song through heaven's door.

This address was also given:

TO MRS. OLIVE CLEVELAND CLARKE.

SEPT. 26, 1785—1885.

A hundred years ago!
Still heaved the billows of that strife
In which was won our nation's life;
Nor yet, emerging from the flood,
Its form of law and compact stood.

A hundred years ago!
Thrones which for ages had held place
Tattered and crumbled on their base.
Napoleon's star of destiny
Not yet affrighted Europe's sky,
Where, rising soon, it lurid gleamed
Till some who won our freedom deemed
This hemisphere must see its ray
Eclipse our newly risen day.

A hundred years ago!
Could one who said, "A child is born,"
Look to another century's morn.
While three earth's generations pass,
Cut down and withered like the grass,
And say, "Whatever perils rise,
Its light shall greet these infant eyes,
That way be trodden by these feet,
And to that age these lips repeat
The promises which faith has proved?"
"Above the floods the Lord sits King,
And though the mountains be removed,
His flock need fear no evil thing."
With you this day his name we bless
For all his truth and faithfulness.
Your God, your Refuge, sure and tried,
And even unto death, your Guide.

SARAH A. HYDE.

Mrs. Hannah Cleveland King celebrated her 95th birthday at her residence in Otisco, Feb. 16, 1884. "There were a goodly number of friends, besides her children and grand-children, present, and after refreshments were served, the aged lady entertained the company with speaking pieces she learned and spoke eighty years ago, and was as lively as any one present, and to all appearances bids fair to see a number of birthdays yet."

THE NINETIETH BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY OF LEWIS W. CLEVELAND.—The dial of Time has again marked the 20th of February, and as is his annual custom, Mr. Cleveland invited his children, his nephews and nieces, and his pastor and wife to visit him on that day. Although the day was an exceedingly stormy one, about twenty of his friends gathered to take him by the hand and congratulate him on the ninetieth anniversary of his birth. As this is the inclement season, there were not many friends present from a distance, none out of the county. Tokens of remembrance were received—among them a crayon portrait of Mrs. Clarke, showing her placid countenance at 100 years of age, and from his son, Mr. Edwin Cleveland of California, a supply of fruits, nuts and flowers. Rev. Mr. Cheeseman, in behalf of those present, and some absent ones, presented, with appropriate remarks, an adjustable chair. Mr. Cleveland replied in his usual happy manner, pleased, as he said, that he "still had so many friends." We do not call him a vain man, but he is beginning to indulge in a little pardonable pride in his age. A stranger, to see him, might doubt if he had passed his seventh decade; certainly not more than eighty years. His youthful appearance attracted attention at the centennial birthday reception of his sister, Mrs. Clarke, in Springfield, Mass., last September; one, on being told that he was a brother of Mrs. C.'s, replied, "Oh, no! he is not the one, for her brother is nearly ninety years old." We hope our nonagenarian friend has many happy years before him. His vigor and family record favor it. The united ages of five of his near friends amount to five hundred years. The five are his two sisters, now living, Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. King, his mother and her two sisters.—Skaneateles Free Press, 1886.

Sir Thomas Parsons was knighted by Charles I. about 1634. His coat of arms is still retained in the family in the United States and by his descendants in London, among whom are Sir John and Sir Humphrey; the former Lord Mayor of that city in 1704, the latter in 1731 and 1740. The same coat of arms is also retained by the branch of the Parsons family now long resident in Barbadoes.

Coat of Arms: Argent ? two chevronels ermine, between three eagles displayed, Crest: A leopard's head, held down with a bird's claw.

Joseph Parsons was of this family; came from Great Torrington, near Exeter, Devonshire Co., Eng., 1630, probably with Mr. Pyncheon; was an early settler in Springfield; four of his children born there; removed to Northampton in 1655 and lived there 25 years; then returned to Springfield, and died there, 1683.

From "Sylvester Judd's History": "Northampton was incorporated in 1654 or 5 and town officers were elected in Dec., 1655. Joseph Parsons was one of the three selectmen (or townsmen, as they were then called) chosen. Previous to 1700 we find only seven men in the town that had Mr. prefixed to their names. Two of these were ministers, three were teachers, and the other two, Joseph Parsons, Jr., justice of the peace, and Wm. Clark, who was a most worshipful magistrate and judge. Mrs. was as seldom used, and Miss never. Military titles were never omitted." "Joseph Parsons was largely engaged in the fur trade. He bought a large tract of land in Northampton, some of which remained in the family two hundred years. He was called "Cornet" Joseph; the one who bore the colors in the Cavalry Co.; the third officer in rank. He married Mary Bliss, dau of Thomas Bliss of Hartford."

"Thomas Bliss, b in Belstone Parish, Devonshire Co., England. Came to America, 1636. He was a man of influence in the new colony; died 1649. Resided in Braintree, Weymouth and Rehoboth, Mass., and in Hartford, Ct. He was son of Jonathan and grandson of Thomas Bliss, a wealthy land owner. He was persecuted under Archbishop Laud. He and his sons suffered long imprisonment. One of them died in prison—the other two came to America in 1635."

"Esqr." Joseph Parsons, son of Joseph and Mary Bliss Parson, b 1647, was very prominent as a lawyer and justice of the peace; was first judge of Hampshire Co. Court, 1698; of extensive business, largely connected with political and military life. He and his wife lived together 60 years. Of their eight sons two were ministers, one captain one lieutenant.

The first agreement for the settlement of Springfield, or Agawam, as it was then called, was made May 14, 1636. The deed of the land was given to Mr. Pyncheon, Henry Smith and John Burr, by Commucke and Mantanchan and eleven other Indians, July 15, 1636. The deed was witnessed by Joseph Parsons and six others. The Indians received for the land, 18 fathoms of wampum, 18 coats, 18 hatchets, 18 hoes and 18 knives; it was considered a fair price. The town was settled largely by people from Roxbury.

In the account of the Quarto Milleennial Celebration of Springfield, May 25, 1886, the names of early settlers are given, and among them are Joseph Parsons and Alexander Edwards, also John Searle; probably it was his wife who afterwards married Alexander Edwards. It also gives under date Sept. 10, 1674: "Mrs. Mary Parsons, wife of Joseph Parsons, a wealthy man of Northampton, brought before the Springfield court, charged with witchcraft. She was held to appear at Boston." May 13, 1675: "Mary Parsons, of Northampton tried and acquitted." She was a high spirited woman and plead her own case.

Copied from Northampton Records:

"July 31, 1759, Mercy, Gad and Thankful Parsons, all children of Jacob and Beulah Parsons, were born and all lived to be baptized the next Sabbath, being all perfect children."

(Lydia Edwards, dau of Ebenezer Edwards, was baptized at the same time. She was universally loved; kind, intelligent and interesting; a very superior woman.)

There was signification in their names, as Gad is, a troop cometh, it was a mercy, and they should be thankful. It was the custom to give suggestive names. Sometimes a passage of Scripture would be given for a name. An acquaintance of the family was named, "Through much tribulation we enter into the kingdom of Heaven." He was called "Tribby."

The name is of the most eminent respectability in various counties in England, and often occurs in reports from the 13th century.

"Dea." Jonathan Hunt, b in Hartford, 1637, moved from there to Northampton, 1660; was a maulster; was representative to the General Court, 1690; d Sept. 29, 1691,—"Hunt Genealogy."

The "History of Northampton" says he lived on Elm street. There were four generations of the same name lived in the same neighborhood. He acquired a valuable trade (a cooper) and laid the foundation of an excellent character before he came to Northampton. Opportune his arrival, proving an acquisition to that infant community of great worth, he received a home lot and 46 acres.

His son, Ebenezer Hunt, lived on Bridge street, Northampton, after his marriage till 1723, then moved to Lebanon, Ct. Capt. Wm. Clark moved there from Northampton before him. Two of his children afterwards settled in Northampton: Dea. Ebenezer, and Beulah, who m Jacob Parsons.

Lieut. Jonathan Hunt, b 1666, second son of Dea. Jonathan Hunt, lived on the homestead on Elm street till 1724, then gave it to his son, Capt. Jonathan, and built for himself farther up the street on what was afterwards known as the "Henshaw Place." He died 1738, leaving the place to his son John, who built in 1752 the house now owned and occupied by S. E. Bridgman, one of the handsomest at that time in town. The home lot, of great extent and beauty, was the finest looking in town. As late as 1781 the house was one of the five painted ones in town. John Hunt set out the elms in front of the house in 1753, which gave the name to the street, and are now so magnificent. As many as seven families of Hunts lived on Elm street in the 18th century.

John Hunt's daughter Martha married Judge Samuel Henshaw, and occupied the place most of her life, dying here, 1842. The place continued in the family 124 years.

"Dea." Ebenezer Hunt's house was another one of the five painted ones; Caleb Strong's another, and all were stately, gambrel-roof dwellings.

Dr. Ebenezer Hunt was grandson of Ebenezer and Hannah (Clark) Hunt. It was a disputed point at one time whether Mrs. Dr. Hunt or Mrs. Benjamin Tappan had the first carpet in town.

CLARK.

Lieut. Wm. Clark, b 1609, came in the "Mary and John," 1630; settled first in Dorchester; from there came to Northampton, 1659. He was the first to build in the vicinity of what is now Elm street. In 1661 a company of militia was organized, numbering but 60, not entitling them to a Captain. Wm. Clark was chosen Lieutenant, the highest office—a marked compliment, military titles being highly prized. He held other positions of honor. For 20 years was one of the selectmen, and was one of the judges of the County Court that met semi-annually at Springfield and Northampton. He died July 18, 1690. His wife, Sarah, died Sept. 6, 1675.

His son, Capt. Wm. Clark, married Hannah Strong, the 15th child of "Elder" John Strong. They were parents of Hannah, who married Ebenezer Hunt, 1698.

Lieut. Wm. Clark's son John, b 1661, usually called "Dea." John, had ten children remarkable for longevity. John married for his second wife, Mary, the 13th child of "Elder" John Strong. His six sons and four daughters all lived to be over 70; three died between 80 and 90, and four were over 90. "Ensign" Josiah, the youngest, was 92; he was father of Dea. Josiah, whose son Isaac married Nancy, daughter of Ebenezer Edwards. "Ensign" Josiah, b 1697, m 1719, Thankful, dau of Isaac Sheldon, Jr. Increase Clark, brother of Josiah, m Mary Sheldon, sister of Thankful; they were great-grandparents of Nathan Clark of Westhampton, Mass.

SHELDON.

Isaac Sheldon, b 1629, in Essex, near London; m 1655, Mary, dau of Thomas Woodford; came into possession of his home on Bridge street, 1660; has remained in the family 225 years, simply descended from father to son, not been recorded since the earliest time. He afterwards lived on King street, first owned by his father-in-law, and since by Jonathan Edwards, where the large elms stand; leaving the place on Bridge street to his son, "Ensign" Ebenezer, who m Mary Hunt. His son Thomas presented the church in 1725 vessels of massive silver plate, still in use on sacramental occasions, having his name engraved on it. Isaac Sheldon's dau Ruth m Samuel, s of John Strong; their dau Mary m Nathaniel Edwards; his son Isaac, b Sept. 4, 1656, m Nov. 25, 1685, Sarah, dau of Daniel Warner of Hatfield; their dau Sarah m Josiah Parsons. "Walter Gifford, son of Sir Ambrose Gifford, came to Massachusetts Bay in 1630 from England." "Sir Randolphe de Gifford went to England from Normandy with William the Conqueror, and was one of his standard bearers. The family of Gifford is of high antiquity and was seated at Honfluer in Normandy three hundred years before the conquest of England by William. Sir Stephen Gifford was one of the bearers accompanying Richard Coeur de Lion to the Holy Land, and was killed at the Siege of Jerusalem. The family enjoyed great distinction in the English courts for several centuries, and no less than five peerages existed in it at one time."—Domesday's Book of Heraldry.

The History of Bristol Co., Mass., pays this tribute to them: "All the Giffords in New England are descended from Sir Ambrose Gifford, and the descendants in America are found no unworthy bearers of the honorable name, as they have distinguished themselves in art, literature and science. Honesty, sturdy independence and industry have been characteristic of the name in Bristol Co., where many bear it."

In the Boston records we find the Giffords used coat of arms in the early settlement of the country, which is proof they were entitled to it.

Coat of Arms: Gules, three lions passant; argent. Crest, an arm couped above the elbow; vested or, charged with two bars wavy azure; cuffed white, holding in the hand a stag's head caboshed gules. Motto: Non Sine Numine.

Dartmouth named from the town in England. Many of the original purchasers came in the Mayflower and settled first in Plymouth. The town originally composed Dartmouth, Westport, New Bedford, Fairhaven and Acushnet. It was conveyed by deed Nov. 29, 1652, from the Indians, Massasoit and Wamsutta, to Wm. Bradford, Capt. Standish, Thomas Southworth, John Winslow, John Cooke and their associates—thirty-four persons. They gave for the land, streams, etc., 30 yards cloth, 8 moose skins, 15 axes, 15 hoes, 15 pair breeches, 8 blankets, 2 kettles, 2 pounds in wampum, 8 pair stockings, 8 pair shoes, 1 iron pot and 10 shillings in other commodities, meaning, probably, fire-water. Sarah Obadiah, the noted Indian woman, lived here.

Sung in the Presbyterian church, Skaneateles, Feb. 11, 1874, immediately on hearing of the death of Stephen A. Gifford:

HOME AT LAST.

Home at last! home at last!

From an earthly shore;

For O! I've joined the ransomed ones,

Who passed on long before.

Here each tear is wiped away

By God, the Holy one;

There's naught but songs of joy and praise,

'Round the Eternal's throne.

Safe at home! safe at home!

Let the echo go

To soothe the hearts that mourn me yet.

In that first home below.

His dear arms are 'round me now,

Who was for sinners slain;

Through him I've won eternal life—

For me to die was gain.

Safe at home! safe at home!

From an earthly shore;

I'll bless and praise Thee, O my God,

Forever, evermore.

His funeral discourse was from Psalms xvi: 11: "In Thy presence there is fullness of joy; at Thy right hand there are pleasures forevermore."

History of Bristol Co. says of Barbara Howland Gifford, w of Elihu Gifford: "She was a woman of great strength of character. Very thoughtful of others, she was universally loved, and was called by everyone in her old age, 'Grandmother Barbara.' She was erect and quick in her movements, retained her activity until her death, and was noted for her superb horsemanship. She was an elder in the Friends Society and held in high esteem. She m 2d, John W. Gifford of Westport."

When young she was one day riding a horse that had been a racer, and some young men of her acquaintance rode along and challenged her to a race. She gave her horse the signal and far out-distanced her competitors. When telling it in advanced years, she added. "But it was not nice for me to do so while on my way to meeting."

LEONARD.

"The Leonards have been a family of considerable prominence in England for many generations. They are descended from Leonard, Lord Daere, of England, and from Edward III., viz.: Through John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and Thomas Plantagenet, Duke of Glouster. James and Henry, brothers, were the first who came to America. They were the sons of Thomas Leonard of Pontypool, County Monmouth, Wales, which place is famous for its iron works and mines. They were identified with the first three iron works in America, at Braintree, Lynn and Taunton. They finally settled at Taunton and were the progenitors of the family of Leonards who have been more or less identified with the history of Bristol Co. from that time to the present. The Leonards have almost invariably been men of great wealth and high position. The first genealogical account of any extent in New England was Dr. Forbes' "Account of the Leonard Family." During King Philip's war Taunton suffered less than the surrounding settlements, as Philip was friendly with some of the people, especially with the Leonard family. He gave orders that they were not to be molested."

Josiah Leonard, who married Content, dau of John and Mary (Potter) Anthony was descended from this family.

PEASE.

Lorenzo Warriner Pease, b May 20, 1809, in Hinsdale, Mass.; d Aug. 28, 1839, in Larnaca, Isle of Cyprus; was eldest child of Erastus and Persis (Chapin) Pease. The family came to Auburn, 1811, where they afterwards resided. Lorenzo entered Sophomore class, Hamilton College, 1825, graduating with honor in 1828; commenced the study of law; was converted in 1831, and entered the middle class in Auburn Theological Seminary; graduated in 1833, and spent the following year in Andover Seminary to pursue the study of Greek and Hebrew, preparatory to going as a missionary to the Greeks.

He was ordained as a missionary by the Presbytery of Cayuga, in the First Presbyterian church, Auburn, June 26, 1834; at the close of the services he was united in marriage to Lucinda Leonard, dau Josiah and Content Leonard. He sailed from Boston for Cyprus, Aug. 22, 1834.

His literary labors comprised contributions to the "Evangelist," "Missionary Herald," in English; to the "Apotheke," a Greek periodical issued from the Smyrna press. He also translated some English works into the Greek. He had finished a work on "The Sabbath," written in Greek, the night he was seized with his last illness—published after his death. But his two great works remain unfinished. The first was his Greek Grammar, written in Modern Greek. He was making the third draft of it, which he had designed completing the year he died. The other, "Researches in Cyprus and a History of the Mission," was also a work of years. In his tours for Bible distribution and preaching, Mr. Pease had visited every village on the Island, and, the maps in use proving erroneous, had drawn a correct one of the Island. He visited the ancient tombs and ruins, making valuable additions to his cabinet of curiosities, and antedated by thirty years Cesnola's discoveries. The relics from the tombs of Cyprus, which Mr. Pease sent to Hamilton College and Auburn Theological Seminary, are said by Prof. Isaac N. Hall to be as reliable as any he saw in Cesnola's collection. Mr. Pease had also in course of preparation a book of Scripture Illustrations, as he found the customs of the people made plain many passages of scripture obscure to American readers.

In 1838 Mr. and Mrs. Pease lost an infant son and daughter, and on each occasion the Bishop of St. Lazarus (Greek) church in Larnaca requested permission to walk in the funeral procession with the priests of the church, and gave permission to bury the remains in the graveyard of St. Lazarus, offering the use of the church for the funeral sermon—the second time a protestant had been allowed to speak in a Greek church. Although more than forty years have elapsed since Mr. Pease's death, his grave is still cared for and "The Teacher" is still held in loving remembrance.

Mrs. Pease remained on missionary ground until 1841, when failing health demanding change of climate, made her return to native country imperative. She brought her two little girls to Auburn, where she has since resided. Her daughter Sarah married Charles Wadsworth. Her daughter Harriet married Rev. Levi Parsons, D. D., of Mt. Morris. (See Parsons record.)

Edward Slade, born in Wales; little is known of him except that he lost his life in a voyage between this country and Wales.

His son William, also born in Wales, settled at Newport, Rhode Island, where he was admitted a freeman of the colony, Aug. 23, 1659. In 1680 he removed to Somerset, Bristol Co., Mass.; died 1729; married Sarah Holmes. She outlived her husband several years and at her death had 535 descendants. He was a prominent man in the early settlement of Somerset, and a large land owner; some of it still in the family. He was the first white man to own and keep the ferry, known as Slade's Ferry, formerly run by Indians. Edward Winslow, afterwards Gov. of Plymouth Colony, writes of his journey to visit Massachusetts when ill, March, 1623: "The next day about one of the clock we came to a ferry where upon discharge of my piece, divers Indians came to us from a house not far off." Supposed to be Slade's Ferry, between Somerset and Fall River. The ferry was next owned by his son Jonathan, and by him willed to Samuel, son of his brother Edward.

"At a quarterly meeting of first of fifth month, 1639, to Thomas Slaid is granted 1 house lott to be built upon in one yr. or be forfeited."

Slade means a small strip of open land in a forest.

Holme means plain, grassy ground upon water side or in the water. The s afterwards added.

"Leonard Macomber, like his father and grandfather, enjoyed a high degree of public confidence—was a pleasant neighbor and good citizen, of irreproachable character, kind hearted and generous. In all his public and private transactions he manifested sound judgment, strict integrity and ability."—History of Bristol Co., Mass.

"The Shermans are of German origin. In the Fatherland the name Sherman, Schearman, Scherman, often occurs, and was no doubt transferred to London and its vicinity many centuries ago by the Anglo-Saxon emigrants, where it still remains numerous. From these sprang the branch at Dedham, County Essex, Eng. The name is derived from the original occupation of the family: They were cloth dressers or shearers of the cloth. The family at Dedham retained the occupation of the family also the coat of arms worn by those in and about London. In New England are found two distinct families bearing the name. One of them descends from William Sherman, who came over with the Pilgrims, about 1630, and settled in Marshfield. The other is the Dedham stock, a branch of which emigrated to New England and settled in the vicinity of Boston. The first of the name in that line of which we have any knowledge, and perhaps the one who originally emigrated there was Henry Sherman, who died 1589. He was great-grandfather of Philip Sherman, who came to America in 1634, and it is this branch we are endeavoring to trace.

The early records of Portsmouth, prepared by him, show him to be a neat and skillful penman and an educated man. In 1636 he, with seventeen others, purchased of the Indians the islands of Rhode Island: Patience, Hope and Conanicut. After coming to R. I. he left the Congregational church and united with the Friends. He died in Portsmouth, R. I. 1687.

It is hoped that others will add to these records. The compiler will be pleased to receive any items of family history that the friends may obtain.

It has been said, "Family pride is elevating in its influence. One who has regard for his ancestors, will be more likely so to conduct himself, and to so teach his children, by precept as well as example, that they may be proud to keep a record of their ancestors."
